

Ron MacLean

Host of Hockey Night in Canada
An Evening with Ron MacLean

Ron MacLean is one of Canada's most beloved sportscasters and a true icon of our national past time. As the authoritative, nimble host of CBC's Hockey Night in Canada, MacLean is one of the game's most eloquent ambassadors -- and a welcome guest in millions of Canadian homes every Saturday night during the hockey season.

In his keynotes, MacLean draws on his experiences with the hundreds of athletes he's met to show you how sports provides a canvas on which the best of human achievement is showcased. He tells the stories behind the stories that appear on television, and he touches on issues such as great leadership, teamwork, and individual performances. Always engaging and personable, he is a popular choice for any corporate and association audience.

A seven-time Gemini winner, the Red Deer native knows about more than just hockey (though he knows more about hockey than just about anyone else). For instance, he has hosted CBC's coverage of both the Summer and the Winter Olympic Games. On HNIC, he also co-hosts "Coach's Corner," with Don Cherry, often the most-watched segment on Canadian television that week. An advocate for all-things hockey, MacLean is a prominent supporter of minor league hockey in Canada and is a former certified level five referee with Hockey Canada. He lives with his wife, Cari, in Oakville, Ontario.
